

Sheltered Instruction in Social Studies

June 24th
9:30 - 12:30 CST

ONLINE via ZOOM

As a content area, social studies offers students a place to develop critical thinking skills, gain empathy, and better understand the world around them. In order to access the content, however, students must feel comfortable, welcome, and successful in their instructional setting.

In this session, we'll discuss instructional strategies and linguistic accommodations designed to shelter instruction so that all students can participate and contribute within their learning community. These tips are designed to maximize engagement and build academic vocabulary simultaneously.

Who Should Attend:

- Teachers of ELs, bilingual learners, and English-only learners
- ESL teachers
- Campus/district administrators
- Instructional coaches and specialists
- District social studies and ESL coordinators

- Presented by -

TINA BEENE is an educational consultant, author, and co-author of the second book in this series, Teaching Science to ELs. A graduate of Texas A&M and Texas Wesleyan University, Tina served as a bilingual teacher, specialist, and program coordinator before joining the Seidlitz team. She is a passionate advocate for English learners and the educators who support them and believes targeted professional development can equip both teachers and students to excel despite the ever-increasing demands of the modern classroom.

This highly recommended resource is available on Seidlitz Education.com or Amazon.
